

In the early days of our nation, Thanksgiving was a celebration of the harvest that the Pilgrims were able to have thanks to the Native Americans. As a thank you for them teaching us how to grow our own food and not die in the harsh winter, the tradition of Thanksgiving Day was “born”. Nowadays, I am grateful for so many reasons. There are so many things in my life to be thankful for. I will choose three particular reasons to write on. So sit back, read and I hope that you enjoy my writing.

First of all, one reason I am thankful for is that I have a life. I am thankful for that because some children my age sometimes lose their life. I feel bad for them. I love my life so much that I can't even imagine what it would be like if someone took it from me; like the mom that lost her life while protecting her children during a shooting in our community. This is a wonderful world and place. I don't understand why some people cannot see the beauty of it. I can't wait to see more. I love my life so much and I am thankful to be alive.

Another reason why I'm thankful is because I have a home that I love. I live in such a nice neighborhood. My neighbors and friends say hi to me. They play with me and they like coming to visit us. Some people don't have a home. They live in the streets and sleep in cardboard boxes. I feel bad for them.

Finally, my last reason is that I am getting a good education. My teacher, Ms. Morales, helps all the students when in need. My school gives the teachers money so that they can buy books and nice things for us. We have budget cuts but that does not ruin our education. We have a lot of things for us to use and to do work with. We also have a lot of teachers that help us and teach us. We are brilliant and intelligent kids. My teacher says we are her “Superstars”!

In conclusion, I am thankful for so many reasons. I am thankful for my education, my home and my life. There is so much to be thankful for in life. I hope you enjoyed my story and are thankful for the many things our world has to offer us.
