

Everybody should be thankful for their life, giving thanks is the most important thing in life. Sometimes people die of sickness, and if anybody hates their life they should think twice and make the best of their life, and embrace it. Humans only live once, so no one should regret not doing something with their life. The holiday where we all bring thanks to the table is Thanksgiving.

Every person who lives in the United States of America should be thankful for human rights. This is something that not every person in this world has. The fact that we retain these significant laws that make our country the way it is will always be unique. The law that we embrace is the freedom of speech, because we American citizens have the right to protest peacefully. Also what makes our country so unique is our organization. There is a way to do everything, without being or doing harm. Yes, we do have our bumps in the road but of course we pave the road and from there on it's smooth sailing.

One of the most important things you have to be thankful for is your family because no matter what they will have your back. Also they provide support for you at a tough time. Family should be everyone's first concern because without your family you are basically nothing because no human is perfect and when they go through hardships it is imperative that they go to a family member and express your feelings. In your family the people who you should respect the most is your parents because they had raised you and cared for you and let nothing happen to you. They knew you were the main source and you could never be the inferior of the household. Family is what you need in this life.

There are many topics that people are thankful for, but one of them which every human being is thankful for is the soldiers that honor and serve our country. These soldiers risk their lives to protect our country, it is outstanding what they do each and every other day. Our soldiers are more like heroes because hero achieves the unthinkable. We should be very thankful of our soldiers because they allow us to have a unique country. They should be the prestige of this country because of their goals. Everyone says they are getting paid too much money, but they don't think. Without our armed forces we are weak and free for the taking.

Every human on this planet should be thankful for something, because if you aren't then you must be suffering. On thanksgiving we are thankful for the things like shelter, food and water. This country will always stand tall and for our government and armed forces we thank them for letting us have freedom.
