

11/27/11

What I Am Thankful For This Thanksgiving By Talia Winiarsky

I am more thankful for my parents than the turkey sitting at the center of the table. I am more thankful for my brothers than the sweet corn getting crushed and about to get eaten in my mouth. I am more thankful for my house than the fresh chicken on my plate. I am more thankful for my friends than the delicious apple pie. I am more thankful for me and the people I know being safe and healthy more than the bread –and-dissolving- butter on it in my hands. I am more thankful for my teachers and principles than the juicy string beans being brought out by my aunt right now. I am more thankful for my family than all the sweets on the table. I am thankful for my books, pencils, crayons, toys, markers, and all other art supplies that I use almost as much as the food that we eat on thanksgiving. I am thankful for my clothing just the same as the creamy pale mashed potato. I am thankful for my sneakers, boots, bicycle , and scooter almost as much as the cranberry sauce. I am thankful for lights, air conditioner, heater almost as much as the food I am eating this thanksgiving. I am equally thankful for my blanket, mattress, pillows, as much as the food on my plate and at the family bafet. I am thankful for everything I use and have including food, and when I said more it does not mean that I am not thankful for the food.`` Please pass the fresh suculant stuffing “. I am thankful for all of these things because I am lucky to have all of this in my life.