Organ, Eye And Tissue Donor Information

| ISSUE: HEALTH

IMPORTANT

A member of our community, 27-year-old Rachael Eisenson of St. James, has been diagnosed with end-stage renal failure and is currently being treated at Cornell Medical Center's Renal Transplant Program. Her family has reached out to our office in hopes of finding a kidney donor for their daughter.

The family, who have all been ruled out as potential donors, needs a donor with blood type "O" and are calling on fellow Long Islanders to assist them. Anyone who is able to donate a kidney should contact the donor team by phone at 212-746-3922 (8 am to 4pm EST) or by email at anr9118@nyp.org. All potential donors should let the donor team know they are calling for Rachael Eisenson. The transplant center at Cornell is willing to test potential donors free of charge and all who participate are under absolutely no obligation.

Hopefully, someone in our community will be able and willing to assist this family in their time of need. Thank you.

More than 10,000 New Yorkers are on waiting lists as the need for donations far exceeds the supply. One person who donates organs (heart, lungs, liver, kidneys, pancreas and intestines) can save up to eight lives, while a tissue donor (corneas, bone, skin, heart valves, tendons, veins, etc.) can improve 12 or more lives by restoring eyesight, helping fight infections in burn patients and preventing the loss of mobility and disability.

In 2012, the late Assemblyman James Conte led the fight, along with Senator David Carlucci and Assemblyman Felix Ortiz, to pass Lauren's Law. Their successful effort will help increase the number of new drivers who become organ donors by changing the language on Department of Motor Vehicles applications so that applicants must complete the organ donor registry section. By requiring each person to check a box for "yes" or "skip this question", the law will help increase the number of people who register with New York State's Donate Life Registry and help save lives.

The legislation was named after Lauren Shields, a 12-year old heart transplant recipient. The new law is now in effect in New York State.
