Said 2025 Veterans Hall of Fame inductee Sgt. Randy Jurgensen: “I know this is a well-used term, but as I sat there amongst my fellow veterans who are considered heroes, we were thinking about the ones who didn’t make it home: they’re our true heroes. It was a real honor to be amongst my fellow veterans, and it was a very emotional event, which brings back so many memories for all of us. I truly thank Majority Leader Stewart-Cousins, for working with me to recognize those who served and died in the Korean War by establishing the annual Korean War Veterans Remembrance Day in Albany, and for thinking of me this way with this honor today.”

Born in Harlem in 1933, Randy Jurgensen started his military career as a Paratrooper in the Korean War. He fought bravely in the Battle of Pork Chop Hill and earned three Bronze Stars and a Purple Heart for his heroism. His helmet, a symbol of his bravery, is on display at the U.S. Military Academy at West Point. After the war, Jurgensen joined the NYPD in 1958 and became one of the department’s most respected homicide detectives. He led many important investigations, including the 1972 Harlem Mosque incident, where Officer Phil Cardillo was killed. Jurgensen’s 2006 book, Circle of Six, re-opened this case and kept Patrolman Cardillo’s memory alive.
