According to AAA, an analysis of the National Digital Car Seat Check Form database found that 74 percent of car seats inspected in 2023 were improperly installed or used. This stands in sharp contrast to the nearly 90 percent of parents who believe they've installed their car seat correctly.

"Every parent's wish is for their child to be safe, especially in the event of a traffic accident," said Sen. Martinez. "However, even small installation or usage mistakes with car and booster seats can have devastating consequences. This event helped reassure families across our community that their children are protected to the greatest extent possible while on the road."
