On August 5, Senator Steve Rhoads, joined by Senator Monica Martinez and a dedicated group of interns, proudly partnered with Habitat for Humanity for a hands-on community build project. The group worked side-by-side with volunteers and Habitat staff to help construct a home for a local family in need. The effort wasn't just symbolic—Senator Rhoads and several members of Senator Rhoads' district office staff rolled up their sleeves and got to work on-site, reinforcing their shared commitment to public service and supporting the hardworking families who are the backbone of Long Island. "This is what real community looks like—neighbors helping neighbors and leaders stepping up to serve alongside those they represent,” said Senator Rhoads. “I’m proud of my team and grateful to Habitat for Humanity for the opportunity to make a lasting difference in someone’s life.” The project reflects a broader commitment by Senator Rhoads to uplift families across the region through collaboration, compassion, and hard work.
