Addabbo: “Don’t Let the Bedbugs Bite!”

JOSEPH P. ADDABBO JR January 25, 2011

Senator and Assemblyman Mike Miller Sponsor Free Seminar with Experts on How to Prevent or

Eliminate the Growing Menace

Queens, NY, January 19, 2011 – On Thursday, February 17 at 7 p.m., NYS Senator Joseph P. Addabbo, Jr. and Assemblyman Michael Miller, are sponsoring a free seminar providing important information from the experts on how to prevent, identify, or get rid of, the spreading problem of bedbug infestations. If you or someone you know is concerned with the issues of bedbugs, come to the event at Emanuel United Church of Christ, 93-12 91st Avenue (off Woodhaven Blvd., near Atlantic Avenue) featuring speakers from the NYC Department of Health, NYC Department of Housing Preservation and Development, and local pest control business Advanced Exterminating owner, William Puricelli.

Addabbo notes, “I want to thank these experts for providing a timely information seminar to my constituents -- homeowners, tenants or landlords -- who are afraid that the city’s bedbug plague will hit their buildings.” The Senator points out that it has been reported that the city had logged 12,768 bedbug complaints for 2009, with bedbug violations issued by HPD inspectors exploding from 82 in 2004 to 4,808 in that same year. In 2010, exterminators were extremely busy, as the nasty critters temporarily shut down businesses, forced residents to move, and left beleaguered New Yorkers suffering from red welts and bites. Some local movie theaters, offices and hotels also reported being visited by the bugs.

According to local certified entomologists and exterminators, bedbug removal is one of the most difficult and costly tasks in the pest control industry. Landlords have been known to spend up to $80,000 to get large buildings bedbug free. Adding to landlords' woes of dealing with these pests is the "Bedbug Disclosure Act," a new citywide law that took effect August 30, 2010, which requires landlords to notify prospective tenants about any infestations in the building within the previous year. The law's stated goal is to suppress the bedbug epidemic by giving "landlords an incentive to comply with their legal obligations to eradicate" infestations. However, the disclosure act fails to include any legal or financial penalties for landlords who do not comply.
