Resources Available for Job Seekers to Help Find New Career Opportunities

NANUET, NY – While unemployment continues to remain stubbornly high, Senator David Carlucci (D-Rockland/Orange) announced he will be hosting a Jobs Workshop to provide residents the chance to acquire new skills and career opportunities in today's recovering economy."

The event will be held on Tuesday, October 30th from 1pm – 4pm at Finkelstein Memorial Library, located at 24 Chestnut Street, Spring Valley. The seminar will take place inside the Fielding Room on the third floor.

"In these tough economic times, every leg up to gain a competitive edge can make the difference between finding that new job and being left behind," said Senator Carlucci. "This Jobs Workshop will give those who remain unemployed or underemployed the tools they need to better their job prospects and renew their place in the workforce."

Tomorrow's Workplace, a high-tech user friendly employment resource center which serves residents and employers of Rockland County, along with the New City Library, will be among the experts scheduled to discuss variety of topics, including but not limited to:

- ü Searching for a job via the internet

- ü Interviewing skills

- ü Resume writing

- ü Networking and Social Media in the Digital Age

To register for the event, residents are asked to RSVP by calling Senator Carlucci's office at (845) 623-3627.
