American Red Cross Hurricane Sandy Report: October 29, 2012

MARTIN J. GOLDEN October 29, 2012

As Sandy continues to move toward the Northeast, with hurricane-force winds extending more than 100 miles per hour from the center, the American Red Cross continues to mobilize resources and workers across the Greater New York Region to help those in our area who are being affected by this massive storm.

In anticipation of Sandy making landfall in our area, the American Red Cross has been mobilizing hundreds of disaster responders, positioning relief supplies and working closely with government and community partners in preparation for a large-scale response.

Last night the Red Cross operated 20 shelters across our region with more than 700 people seeking refuge.

Today, we expect to open additional shelters and the number of shelter residents will increase.

The main message for today is “Stay Safe” and heed all warnings and orders from emergency officials.

Red Cross workers are providing shelter residents with meals, a safe, dry, place to sleep, health services and emotional support as they safely ride out this potentially life-threatening storm. The American Red Cross has opened the following shelters in Greater New York, as of 11 am, Oct. 29:

Be safe during the storm

- If you or loved ones are in Sandy's path, please take precautions to be safe. You can get information what to do during and after this storm here.

- Consider registering yourself at the Red Cross Safe and Well website to let loved ones know you are safe during this stressful time. Safe and Well is available 24 hours a day, 365 days a year, and is accessible in both English and Spanish.

Download the free Red Cross Hurricane and First Aid apps to have safety and first aid information at your fingertips.

- The hurricane app features weather alerts, information on open Red Cross shelters, a toolkit with a flashlight, strobe light and alarm and a one-touch "I'm Safe" button that lets someone use social media outlets to let family and friends know they are okay. It's also available in Spanish just by changing the smart phone setting to Spanish before downloading the app.

- The First Aid app puts expert advice for everyday emergencies in someone's hand.
- The apps can be found in the Apple App Store and the Google Play Store for Android by searching for American Red Cross. Important links are also below:
