Tkaczyk Has Senate's Best Score on Environmental Legislation

CECILIA TKACZYK October 10, 2013

| ISSUE: ENVIRONMENT

State Senator Cecilia Tkaczyk was given the highest score in the State Senate by Environmental Advocates of New York, in recognition of her strong record of sponsoring and supporting legislation to protect New York's environment.

"I am very proud to have received a perfect score on environmental legislation," Senator Tkaczyk said. "Protecting the State's beautiful natural resources, as well as the health of our residents, is a responsibility that should not be taken lightly, and I thank EPL/Environmental Advocates for their recognition of my work in the Senate."

Legislators' scores are heavily influenced by their support for the Super Bills, the most pressing environmental priorities for New York.

This year, the environmental Super Bills included:

- Child Safe Products Act: Requires manufacturers of children's products to disclose if their products contain dangerous chemicals.
- Fracking Moratorium and Health Impacts Assessment: Directs New York State to conduct a comprehensive assessment of fracking's public health impacts and ensures that no gas drilling permits will be issued prior to the final assessment.
- New York Solar Bill: Establishes a 10-year, $1.5 billion incentive program which solidifies New York's solar-energy commitment to spark private investment and bring more solar power to New York.
- Climate Protection Act: Seeks to reduce the State's greenhouse gas emissions.
