Elmira, N.Y.—State Senator Tom O'Mara (R-C, Big Flats) has announced that he's sponsoring an online summer reading program that the New York State Senate will be promoting throughout the summer of 2015 in partnership with the New York State Library and public libraries across the Southern Tier and Finger Lakes regions, and statewide.

"I'm glad to have this opportunity to join with so many local public libraries and other groups and organizations seeking to encourage summer reading," said O'Mara. "The Senate's online summer reading program offers a convenient opportunity for students and their parents to enjoy the benefits and the rewards of summer reading together. Our region is incredibly fortunate to have such an outstanding network of public libraries providing access to books and other reading activities, materials and opportunities.”

Numerous studies have shown that children who engage in summer reading make greater academic gains than children who do not.

According to New York State Library officials, last year’s summer reading program featured the participation of 1.9 million young people statewide. Program coordinators at the New York State Library, Senate and Assembly hope that increased attention on the benefits of summer reading will result in expanded participation this year.
