Increasing College Access for High School Graduates

VELMANETTE MONTGOMERY September 8, 2015

| ISSUE: HIGHER EDUCATION

Governor Cuomo announced up to $500,000 in state grants to increase college access for 2016 high school graduates. New York State's College Action Grants will award up to $5,000 to eligible high schools and community organizations that promote activities aimed at increasing the rate of low-income New York State high school seniors who apply to college, complete the Free Application for Federal Student Aid, and ultimately enroll in a college.

Eligible high schools are those in which 50 percent or more of the students are eligible to participate in the federal free and reduced-price lunch program. Qualified not-for-profit organizations serving low-income students from such high schools are also eligible to apply for this grant opportunity.

The College Action Grants are administered by the New York State Higher Education Services Corporation and financed through a $6.5 million College Access Challenge Grant awarded to the State in 2014 by the U.S. Department of Education to support college access services and activities.

Acting President of the New York State Higher Education Services Corporation Elsa Magee said, "The federal College Access Challenge Grant funds awarded to New York State have allowed us to inspire and assist thousands of students who would have otherwise struggled in their pursuit of a postsecondary education. In this, CACG's final year, we are pleased to offer these grants to help students navigate the three critical components required to make their college dreams a reality."

College Action Grant applicants must agree to participate in three statewide college access initiatives:

College Application Week, October 26-30, 2015

New York State's Student Financial Aid Awareness Campaign's FAFSA Completion Hands-on Workshop, January – March, 2016

College Signing Day, May 2016
