Budget Allocations

On March 31, the New York State Legislature adopted an on-time 2011-12 State Budget that closed the State's $10 billion deficit through the enactment of deep spending reductions, largely along the lines proposed in the first budget of the newly inaugurated administration of Governor Andrew Cuomo. The budget calls for $132.5 billion in overall spending, a more than two percent reduction from last year's budget. State operating spending will total $88 billion, an increase of $1.2 billion or 1.4% over last year: the overall spending decline reflects the loss of federal stimulus-related support.
