The Pember Museum and Library is well worth a visit

BETTY LITTLE February 9, 2015

| ISSUE: RECREATION AND TOURISM

The Pember Library and Museum were established in Granville, NY, in 1909, by Franklin Tanner Pember and his wife Ellen Wood Pember. Both institutions continue to operate in the building designed and built for this purpose. The Pember Library is housed on the first floor of the marble structure and The Pember Museum of Natural History is located on the second floor

Both are real treasures. Rob Tatko updated me on recently completed projects to preserve and improve this remarkable place. I encourage you to learn more about The Pember, including winter activities for children and adults, by visiting <http://www.thepember.com/>.
