Share your Ideas for PlaNYC 2015

BRAD HOYLMAN March 25, 2015

The City of New York is currently updating PlaNYC—New York City’s blueprint for the future. Every four years, the Administration creates a plan to address New York City growth, sustainability, and resiliency. This year, Mayor de Blasio has added equity as a key element of the plan—recognizing the importance of every New Yorker having access to opportunities. The Administration needs your help to make sure that as many New Yorkers as possible can weigh in on this important process. Please visit www.nyc.gov/ideas to answer the question “how can we make our city better and stronger for our shared future?” Filling out the survey will enable you to leave your mark and share your ideas for how our city moves forward. The survey is offered in seven languages. Please see the attached flyer for more information.
