Senator Gallivan Applauds Federal Funding to Enhance Highway Safety

JIM RANNEY October 13, 2015

Senator Patrick M. Gallivan (R-C-I, Elma) says over $32 million in federal grants will be used to support traffic safety initiatives across New York State, including programs in Western New York. The various programs are designed to reduce the number of deaths and injuries that occur on our highways and to improve overall traffic safety.

“As a former State Trooper and Sheriff of Erie County, I support efforts to make our highways safer for everyone,” Gallivan said. “These education and enforcement programs are a wise investment in making sure New York’s roads are as safe as possible.”

Statewide, federal grants have been awarded to 541 programs administered by state, local and not-for-profit agencies to support three specific safety initiatives:

Police Traffic Service: This includes law enforcement efforts to target dangerous drivers and other enforcement initiatives aimed at preventing speeding, aggressive driving and DWI.

Child Passenger Safety: This includes child safety education, car seat checks and the distribution of safety seats.

Highway Safety Grants: This includes programs that cover additional traffic safety efforts that include education, training, crash reconstruction and railroad crossing safety.
