Senator Patrick M. Gallivan (R-C-I, Elma) says over $39 million in federal grants will be used to support public and non-profit organizations in New York State that provide transportation services to seniors and people with disabilities. The funding from the Federal Transit Administration will be used to purchase vehicles and to support transportation providers throughout the state.

“Providing adequate transportation services for our seniors and people with disabilities is essential,” Gallivan said. “Whether it’s a trip to the doctor’s office, the grocery store or a place of employment, it’s important that we ensure that community based organizations have the resources necessary to provide transportation for those who need it. These essential services give the elderly and those with disabilities a sense of independence and improve their overall quality of life.”

The New York State Department of Transportation administers the program known as the Enhanced Mobility of Seniors and Individuals with Disabilities program. The funds will be used to purchase 415 accessible vehicles and other equipment used to provide transportation services or to provide operating assistance to a total of 152 non-profit and public organizations statewide.
