Daily News OpEd: North Brooklyn Deserves Its Promised Bushwick Inlet Park

DANIEL SQUADRON AND WARD DENNIS May 14, 2016

| ISSUE: PARKS, OPEN SPACE, WILLIAMSBURG, GREENPOINT, BUSHWICK INLET PARK

To Fund It, Consider Borrowing A Trick From De Blasio's Proposed BQX Streetcar

In 2005, the city approved a major rezoning in Greenpoint and Williamsburg, resulting in an explosion of waterfront towers and residential density. As a key part of that rezoning, the community was promised a new, nearly 30-acre Bushwick Inlet Park."

Eleven years later? Thousands of new residents are here; the park is not. The city says it's too expensive."

Daniel Squadron is a state senator representing lower Manhattan and Brooklyn. Ward Dennis is a member of Friends of Bushwick Inlet Park, a community organization.
