Buffalo, north toward Niagara Falls and southwest along the Lake Erie shore; and

WHEREAS, Over the years, General Mills has modernized the plant and its production process, with computers and automation taking on tasks previously done by hand, but much remains the same, with grain still brought by rail or ship from Duluth, Minnesota, and stored in a grain elevator for later use; and

WHEREAS, Within the facility is one of the last working grain elevators in Buffalo, standing sentry at a complex that sprawls more than 27 acres and produces iconic cereal brands and Gold Medal flour for sale across the Northeast and eastern Canada; and

WHEREAS, The facility still brings in much of its grain by ship, and it still mills flour and bakes cereal in a process with roots in

Buffalo's heyday as a grain market and bustling industrial port; and

WHEREAS, With a steadfast and unwavering commitment to excellence, employees of the plant take pride in ensuring that each and every time a customer gets a bowl of Cheerios from Buffalo, it is perfect; and

WHEREAS, A true asset to the Buffalo community, General Mills is a major donor to the Food Bank of Western New York, contributing 1,000 cases of cereal each month; and
