The Students

School Stories, a publication of students at Columbia University's Graduate School of Journalism, reports on students' experiences "navigating the maze of high school admissions." My family's story is among those featured, highlighting my daughter Carla's journey through the admissions process. Really important to demystify this process and help families just trying to do the best by their children. Thanks to School Stories for focusing on this important topic and reporting on it in such an insightful, sensitive manner.
