

NEW YORK STATE SENATOR
Thomas F. O'Mara

The motorsports world mourns the passing of Jean Argetsinger, 'First Lady of American road racing'

THOMAS F. O'MARA January 19, 2017

| ISSUE: AMERICAN MOTORSPORTS

Recognized as the “First Lady of American road racing,” Jean and her late husband, Cameron, are credited with the re-birth of road racing in the United States after World War II and for establishing Watkins Glen International as the home of American racing and one of the world’s iconic sporting venues.

On behalf of the entire 58th Senate District, I would like to extend and express our condolences to the family of Jean Argetsinger, who passed away this week at the age of 97 at her home in Burdett, New York.

Recognized as the “First Lady of American road racing,” Jean and her late husband, Cameron, are credited with the re-birth of road racing in the United States after World War II and for establishing Watkins Glen International as the home of American racing and one of the world's iconic sporting venues.

Ms. Argetsinger was a founder of the International Motor Racing Research (IMRCC) in Watkins Glen, New York. The IMRCC released a statement on her death on Wednesday.

Read more about the life and legacy of Jean Argetsinger HERE. Read her obituary HERE.

News of her death is being reported around the world. Read more from the:

Star-Gazette, "Motorsports pillar Jean Argetsinger dies at 97"

ESPN, "Jean Argetsinger, who steered rebirth of road racing, dies at 97"

Speedsport, "Jean Argetsinger dies at 97"

Yahoo Sports, "Jean Argetsinger, pillar of U.S. road racing, dies at 97"