As 2017 draws to a close, and with a new year around the corner, it is important to reflect on the past twelve months. At this time of year, I would like to share with you what I consider to be some of this year's legislative achievements.

On Election Day, the public approved a Constitutional Amendment that clears the way for the criminal justice system to strip corrupt government officials of their pensions. I co-sponsored and voted for this measure in 2016 and 2017 because hardworking taxpayers should not have to fund the pensions of those who betray the public trust. This represents a major victory in the battle against corruption.

The approved budget was fiscally responsible by limiting spending growth to 2 percent or less for the seventh year in a row. The fiscal plan also protected state income tax relief of more than $4 billion to help millions of middle-class families and thousands of small businesses. Lastly, reform to workers compensation will make New York more affordable by lowering $700 million in costs for businesses, municipalities and not-for-profits.

By enacting a responsible budget, we were able to prioritize state funding for important initiatives. I helped secure $214 million to provide tools to law enforcement and health professionals to combat the heroin and opioid crisis. A total of $400,000 was allocated for research and education for Lyme and other tick-borne diseases. I also voted in favor of $95 million in funding for our public libraries, including $24 million for improvement projects and facility upgrades.

A total of $1.5 billion was committed to improve our crumbling infrastructure, along with a $65 million increase for local road repairs. This major boost in infrastructure funding will help to make our highways, roads and bridges safer.

This holiday season is the first with ride-sharing services available in Upstate New York. Earlier this year, I led the effort at the State Capitol to bring this safe, reliable transportation option to our community. According to the STOP-DWI Office, drunk driving arrests decreased by more than 10 percent over the summer in Erie County. It is my hope that ride-sharing will help to ensure a safer holiday season for all of us.

Although progress has been made, there is still more work to be done. It is truly a pleasure to serve our community, and I look forward to serving you in the New York State Senate in 2018. If I can be of assistance to you or your family, please do not hesitate to contact my district office by phone at (585) 454-0322.

I hope that you and your family have a safe and happy holiday season, and I wish you a happy, healthy and prosperous New Year!
