| ISSUE: INDEPENDENT REDISTRICTING COMMISSION

Albany, NY- Senate Majority Leader Andrea Stewart-Cousins today announced the appointments of John Flateau, Ph.D. and David Imamura to the Independent Redistricting Commission. This independent redistricting commission will be charged with drawing Legislative and Congressional district lines every ten years to ensure a neutral process for all constituents in New York.

“The Independent Redistricting Commission is fundamental to restoring trust in our democracy,” Senate Democratic Majority Leader Andrea Stewart-Cousins said. “I am proud to appoint John Flateau, Ph.D. and David Imamura to serve and advance that goal. Redistricting should be a transparent process based on population, not on partisan politics.”

The commission is composed of 8 members appointed by the Temporary President of the Senate, Speaker of the Assembly, Minority Leader of the Senate, and Minority Leader of the Assembly. The commission was created through a Constitutional Amendment passed by the State Legislature in 2012 and 2013, and approved by New York voters in 2014. The amendment reforms the process to create a neutral system that establishes new state legislative and congressional district lines every ten years. The role of the Independent Redistricting Commission is to draw the Legislative and Congressional district lines in an independent manner that protects minority voting rights and communities of interest, and operates in a bi-partisan manner.

John Flateau, Ph.D. is a Professor and Chair of the Department of Business Administration at the School of Business, Medgar Evers College, CUNY.
