ALBANY- In recognition of Library Advocacy Day, on Wednesday, February 25, Senator Pam Helming welcomed representatives from libraries across the 54th Senate District.

“Our local public libraries provide so many different services and programs to our communities. From young children reading a book for the first time to high school students completing a class research project, and from adults applying for jobs to senior citizens staying active in their golden years, they have so much to offer. Thank you to all of the dedicated representatives who made the trip to Albany this week and I look forward to continuing to advocate on behalf of all of our local libraries,” Senator Helming said
