Breast Cancer Screenings Available through Senator Helming and Rochester Regional Health Partnership

Senator Pam Helming is again partnering with Rochester Regional Health to offer breast cancer screenings to area residents. The screenings are open to women 40 and older who have not been screened in the past year. Space is limited and appointments are required.

Individuals should bring their insurance card. Screenings are covered by most insurance providers. Those without insurance will be connected to the New York State Cancer Services Program which covers the cost of screenings for eligible individuals.

I encourage women to schedule a mammogram appointment and get screened.”

Tonya Brooks, Program Manager, Mobile Mammography Program, Rochester Regional Health said, “To help make our community healthier, it takes all of us working together to make sure all of our residents have access to high-quality health care. By bringing our Mobile Mammography Center into communities in which people live, it helps eliminate one of the barriers that keep women from getting this crucial screening that is proven to save lives.”
