JOHN W. MANNION April 9, 2022

ALBANY, NY – Senator John W. Mannion (D-Geddes) today heralded the passage of the 2022-2023 New York State budget and highlighted how new state investments will help families and improve lives in Central New York.

Senator Mannion secured in the state budget an acceleration of middle class tax cuts, a suspension of the gas tax, historic raises and bonuses for home care workers, the largest-ever investment in child care, pre-k expansion, over $1B for broadband, over $1B for flood risk reduction, and enhanced public safety provisions.

"Budgets are about priorities and this budget clearly demonstrates the Senate Majority's commitment to working families, schools, and public safety. This spending plan will give Central New Yorkers access to affordable childcare, better schools, and more money for people in the healthcare field. Central New Yorkers want and deserve safe neighborhoods which is why I supported giving judges wider discretion to protect the public and deter repeat offenders. I want to thank Majority Leader Andrea Stewart-Cousins and my colleagues for including my budget priorities - including saving the CDPAP program and the local jobs that come with it - in the final agreement."

Additional Mannion budget priorities in the final agreement include $20 million for Dome renovations, saving the CDPAP program and local jobs, funding for I-81, and creation of a new dental training program that benefits people with disabilities.
