NY Sen. Tom O'Mara: One-party rule in Albany means lack of oversight
He says the GOP has been pushed aside by majority Democrats.

"It really boils down to a lack of oversight," Senator O'Mara said. "I don't believe the Legislature is doing its job in oversight of the executive. We have a system of checks and balances, (but) it's one-party rule, and so we're not seeing it."

On Wednesday, November 30, Senator O'Mara joined Capital Tonight's Susan Arbetter to discuss what he sees as one of the most critical shortcomings facing New York State government: the lack of legislative oversight of the executive branch under one-party control.

“It really boils down to a lack of oversight,” Senator O’Mara said. “I don’t believe the Legislature is doing its job in oversight of the executive. We have a system of checks and balances, (but) it’s one-party rule, and so we’re not seeing it.”
