

SENATOR JIM ALESI

Dear Neighbor,

With annual increases in sales of Kindle, Nook, iPad, and other e-reader and portable devices, libraries throughout Monroe County have responded by expanding their electronic book, or “e-book,” lending.

Having recently been appointed to the newly-created Senate Select Committee on Libraries and as a longtime supporter of libraries, I am keenly aware of how valuable the services and resources available at local libraries are to students, professionals, researchers and residents. New York State’s libraries serve everyone from childhood to senior citizenship.

Libraries in Monroe County may provide patrons free access to downloadable books and electronic materials in an effort to expand e-book access for everyone in our community. I encourage you to visit the links below and check with your local library to learn how you can take advantage of this wonderful resource.
