

EDUCATION

We educate the young adult community on how government operates and can work for them as well as how and why we can and should be civically engaged.

Civics 101.1 Workshops November 13, 2017

The Task Force developed and implemented the first of a series of workshops to educate Millennials and young adults on the role of local government, so that they become informed, consistent, and engaged voters and advocates.

"Thank you to Senator Brian Benjamin's Millennial Task Force for co-hosting a Civics 101 workshop with the New York Urban League Young Professionals. As a transplant new to New York City, I feel more knowledgeable about the role that local government can play in my everyday life. And I feel more empowered to connect with my elected officials about local issues that my neighbors and I face. As a servant leader, it's always great to demystify government for Millennials, as many of us want to bring solutions to our communities and being civically engaged is the first step."

"Know Your Local Government Offices" Pamphlet December 16, 2017

The pamphlet educated young adults regarding the various local offices up for election and the roles those offices play in our day-to-day lives in the services they provide to our community.
