

Some ways we can protect our Earth include the prevention of over harvesting, gas alternatives, recycling, litter removal, and limited use of non-recyclable plastics; however, the truth is that a lot of people ignore these options. Most people don't see the big picture or they turn their back to it so they can continue on with paced lives. Some believe because of this it makes it impossible to find time to care for the Earth, but I think otherwise.

Our fast-paced lives conditioned our mindsets to be fit for making the things we want happen fast, the only issue is making people want to make that change. Tesla's electric cars are the perfect example of the appeal that drives (no pun intended) people to make a change. If we can make Earth preservation appeal to the public, we can better protect our Earth.
