Thanksgiving

Thanksgiving isn't just any ordinary holiday. It isn't just a holiday where we get to skip school and stay home. It isn't just a holiday where we make each other cards and give each other gifts. No, it's not either of those things. Thanksgiving is a holiday where we spend time with family and we say and show what we're thankful for.

Being thankful doesn't just mean saying thanks. It means to be respectful and appreciative for what you have. It means to be thankful for the shelter that keeps you warm during the winter. It means to thank the people that love and comfort you during hard times. It means to be thankful for everyone and everything you have.

Most things that we have and love were bought. But not everything can be bought. The most valuable things mostly come from within the heart. For example, you can't buy love, friendship or family, this stuff comes from within.

One of the things I'm mostly thankful for is the Thanksgiving feast. We should be thankful for this feast because not other people are as fortunate as us to have this feast. One of the things that makes the Thanksgiving feast so important is because this is the time when the whole family comes and joins together. Everyone sits down at the dinner table and enjoys their Thanksgiving feast. During the Thanksgiving feast, we mostly eat cultural foods. Some cultural foods that we should be thankful for are turkey, mashed potato, gravy, cranberry, sweet potato, brussels sprouts, avocado salad, green beans, and much more. Although each culture is unique, since they each add a little of their own kind.

In conclusion, Thanksgiving isn't just any ordinary holiday, it's about being thankful and appreciative for what we have and who we have.
