

Karyn Castellano
Frankfort-Schuyler

November 6,2019
Grade 6

Being thankful means you are pleased and grateful for what you have. Showing or feeling gratitude, being happy, loving and showing gratefulness for what your friends, family, loved ones give you. Showing thankfulnes and gratefulness can make others feel better or good about themselves.

During this time of year. Many people give and show thanks. One reason is they appreciate, enjoy the family that gave a lot to you. Also, stuff you value very well or the value you have for your friendship with one of your friends. We want to be thankful for the water or food that's here. Remember the good things in your day, for example a friend helps you with you homework, or you get to be friends with someone you wanted to be friends with for a long time. Stuff like that can send you to bed with a smile on you face. One thing I am grateful for my friends, because they give me a lot in my life. All the stuff they give me I am very thankful for. Another thing I am thankful for is my friends because they are always there for me through the rough and the right. My family and friends are always there for me when I needed them the most.

Being thankful is important. One reason is because it shows you care about people and what they gave of give you. Another reason is because it shows your appreciation for other people. It is good to be thankful for yourself and others.