

What do you think of when you think of Thanksgiving? I think of reminders—reminders of what I enjoy in life and who to thank for all that I have. Here are some of the things I am reminded of during this time. First off, I am thankful for a home to stay dry in during the cold and snowy winter months. I am reminded of my parents for that gift. I know that working to support a family ^{is hard} but they do a great job of it. One of the biggest traditions during Thanksgiving is food. For that I have to thank a lot of people who work in different jobs involving the food. Even though we do not know them directly, their hard work should definitely be appreciated. Lastly, I would like to thank God for the wonderful world we live in today. There are a lot of important things in life, but you should always be thankful for being able to wake up and seize the day. All in all, every reminder should help us say thank you, and allow us to appreciate everything we have.
