

Emily Rothman

SJBDHS

10/28/21

I have a lot of really wonderful things in my life. I have a family that loves each other, a best friend that looks out for me, teachers that want me to succeed, and even the inanimate objects in my life. It's hard to find something in my life that I'm not grateful for. My life is stable, happy, and full of love and passion. Even when life wasn't all that stable or comfortable in the last two years, it made me appreciate the things that were even more. I go to school everyday where I'm taught and told I can be anything I want to be in life if I have drive and motivation. I am supported and encouraged to step outside of the box and do something remarkable with my life. After school I get to spend time doing what I'm passionate about. Sports, the arts, etc are all open for me to explore and decide exactly what it is I love to do. Then I get to come home and be with my family. They're interested in hearing about my day whether it was good or bad. We talk and laugh and spend time with each other not because we have to but because we genuinely enjoy it. All of these things I have and experience everyday of my life. There are cool opportunities and expensive things I have to be grateful for in my life, but I spend more time being thankful for my everyday life. The comfort, safety, and joy in those things are what I hold dear.