There are so many things in my life that I am thankful for, but the main thing that comes to mind are the people that are in my life. I have so many people in my life that I know love me and will always have my back. I am beyond thankful that these people exist because I can't imagine my life without them. I have the best family I could ever ask for. They are my rock and they are my home. If I have them with me I always know that I will be okay. I also have my best friends. One I've known since I was nine days old and I'm proud to call her my cousin. Then there are others who I have grown closer to over the past year and now I don't know what I would do without them. I know that if I needed any of these people because I was going through a hard time, they would be there for me and I couldn't be anymore thankful for that. The amount of gratitude I have for all of these people is indescribable.
