Thanksgiving is a time where we spend time with those that matter most to us. These people make us who we are, and make our lives just a tiny bit brighter. This year, I am extra thankful for organ donors. When people think of organ donors, they may only think of the small, heart-shaped symbol on their driver's license. But to me and my family, organ donors are loving, compassionate people who have chosen to give their healthy body parts to help save another person's life. On April 11, 2021, by the power and grace of God, my dad received a heart transplant. Because of his organ donor, my dad is able to be with my family this Thanksgiving, and for many more to come, and I will forever be grateful to God for the loving spirit of organ donors.
