

Isabel Dourmashkin

November 15th, 2021

Ms. Morley

PEARLS

thankfulness

I'm thankful for the way the leaves crunch on the ground,

And the way a fireplace crackles, drowning out every other sound.

I'm thankful for the fresh smell of cookies escaping from the other room,

And the ability to make yourself smell like any scent in the world, thanks to perfume.

I'm thankful for snow days, and the comfiness it brings, painting the land white,

And the moon, making the darkness feel magical, revealing the world in twilight.

I'm thankful for books, removing me from reality, and into a new one,

And to-do lists for making me motivated and forcing me to get things done.

I'm thankful for hot cocoa for keeping my hands warm on a frigid day,

And apple-picking trips with family, getting apple cider donuts, right around the holiday.

I'm thankful for the days where I have no homework, and give my mind a break,

And the best part of a birthday, stuffing your mouth with delicious cake.

I'm thankful for the excitement vacation brings and the hospitality of a hotel,

And the ten-minute version Taylor Swift released of "All Too Well".

I'm thankful for the moments before a scary movie, giving me a preview, and comforting me,

And most of all I'm thankful for my teachers, and those who, when I'm older, I want to be.