The qualities that I want to talk about is Honesty, I want to talk about being honest. My friends and family always say that I am very honest with them. That's why I am going to tell you some of the honest things I did.

When I was in first grade I saw a kid stealing a bumble bee car transformer from one of my friends, so I decided to tell my friend that he took his toy. Then my friend told the teacher that the other kid took his toy so she told the kid to give it back but. The kid was giving the teacher a hard time but after a while the kid gave it to the teacher and my friend got it back and my friend was happy again, and then my teacher said. "You are very honest and you're a good kid." I remember when my teacher said that like it was yesterday.

Another story that shows me being honest was when I went to hershey park for my birthday and me and my family were waiting in line to ride the "comet" roller coaster. Then the person in front of me dropped his phone and his wallet right before he was about to get on the ride with his son. So I picked it up and waited for him to get off of the ride and I gave it to him and he said. "Wow thanks if you didn't give me my phone or my wallet I would have been stuck here" then he laughed and said "thank you for being honest we need more people like you and he smiled and walked away with his son."

A third story of me being Honest starts when I was in fourth grade. When I was in school people used to steal other people's things when they were in the bathroom or when they were getting tested for their reading level. So when my friend came back from I forgot either the bathroom or the test his drawing notebook was gone and me and my other friend saw one of the other kids taking his book. When the friend that was out of the room came back we told him and he started to cry with his head down, then I told the teacher for him then he got his book back, he told me "Thanks for having my back" and he smiled and then he left early because he had to go to the doctors.

A story that shows that I am Integrity is when I was with my mom and I took one of her old watches. I was like 7 or 8 I can't remember and she said to me. "Have you seen where my watch is?" I told her yeah and I gave it to her. She was happy that I gave it back to her then she told me. "Thanks for being honest, you know I hate liars." I smiled at her and then we went on our ways. Ever since that happened I never took one of her watches ever again.

A story that shows I am courageous is, one of the times I went to hershey park I was scared to go on the new roller coaster. But I was with my friends and family and they wanted to ride it so I said something like. "I will go on it later, let me just get warmed up first." so later in the day once I got ready they were saying stuff like you got this you can do it and stuff like that. Then I went on it and said, "OMG that is the best ride I have ever been on." And that's how I was courageous.
