People can have different things that make them special. Some things that make me special are that I am good at leading others, coming up with new ideas, and feeling good about myself, making others laugh. I learned these things from my family, friends, and people around me who showed me how to be confident and creative. I am really grateful for these qualities because they help me to be the best person I can be.

Leadership

I think leadership is one of my qualities because when I work with someone I want to help them and be a model for them. For example, when we are in math class our teacher Ms. K gives us an activity. In this activity, if students got a hundred on their test they would be able to teach their classmates on the topic of the test. Whenever I get a hundred on my test and I get to teach I like to be a role model and explain each step. Another example is when we have group projects I want to do extra work to boost our grade or guide my group to success. My last example is, when my younger cousin comes to visit me I like to show her useful skill by doing fun activities. I am grateful for this quality because it is useful in my life.

Creativity

Another quality that I have is creativity. I believe that creativity is a good quality to have because it helps me view and solve problems more openly. In illustration of creativity when I have to work on a project I always have a creative idea. According to my teachers, this makes it fun for them to grade. This also lets me have a good chance of getting extra points. In addition to that I use creative ways to learn (My teachers taught me these methods) For instance, in math when I try to find the GCF or LCM I use the birthday cake method, or when I try to find to main idea of a text i use the table method where the top of the table is the main idea and the legs of the table are the supporting details. Another example is when I spend time with my friends I try to make interesting/creative plans that will be enjoyable for everyone. I am grateful for this skill because it helps me learn, it helps me understand and create things from a different perspective and it causes me to have more self-esteem.

Confidence

Another of my qualities is confidence. I have confidence because I like public speaking. I'm also not scared to express my feelings. For example, last Saturday I had to sing in front of my whole Polish school. I was not afraid, I was excited and faithful everything would go to plan. Another example is today in math I had to present a project. I spoke in front of the whole class knowing that I was prepared to present. As my last example, when I do work that I need to turn in I am always confident when giving it in because I am sure of my answers. I am grateful for this because it helps me be prepared for life opportunities.

My last quality is having lots of humor. This is the quality I am best known for. I believe I have lots of humor because I can make people laugh. For example, when me and my friend are at lunch I am always the one to make them laugh by making funny faces or making a goofy comment. Also, whenever someone is sad I use humor to cheer them up. I am grateful for this quality because it helps me gain friends and differentiate personality from everyone else.

In conclusion, I am grateful for the qualities of leadership, creativity, and confidence that I possess. These qualities have helped me become a better person and have given me the ability to make a positive impact on the people around me. I will continue to use my qualities to achieve my goals and make a difference in the world.
