Thankfulness

There are many qualities that people have, the qualities that I am thankful for are kind, intelligent, creative, positive, polite, respectful, quiet, and an animal lover.

One time when I was kind was when my mom needed assistance in cooking and I did everything that she told me to do. Also I would like to help anybody when needed such as my elderly neighbor, I help her to clean the leaves. I am very thankful for my mom because she always cares about me, and I love her for the way she is.

I think that I am intelligent because I can fix many problems easily. Also sometimes I teach my parents new things like math with exponents or things about the phase changes. Also I know how to solve the rubik's cube, something that many people are not able to achieve.

I think I am creative because I love making new things. For example, one time I made the Empire State Building out of blocks and another one out of toilet paper rolls. Another time I was creative was when I made my own pottery in the Summer. I tried making something similar to a vase though it seemed too hard because I could not get the correct shape and make it look symmetrical. Instead I made pottery that looked like a bunny.

I am positive because I try to look at things the positive way even though they look to be negative. For example when I spilled juice on the floor I took it the positive way and realized that it was time to clean the floor anyways. I think of a glass as half-full instead of half-empty.

I am polite because I always say please and thank you to everybody. For example, I say thank you every day to the people who serve us food in our cafeteria. I am thankful for their service because they give us food everyday. Also I hold the door for others when needed.

I am respectful because I respect everybody's feelings, thoughts and ideas. Even if I didn't think that that is the right thing. This is because nobody is perfect and if everybody's thoughts and ideas were the same the world would be boring, weird and most likely nobody would like it; everybody would act like clones of themselves.

I am quiet because I am shy and I listen and observe other people. I would rather not be in the limelight because if I was I would not be comfortable. I don't feel comfortable when doing public speaking even if it is to my classmates. For example, when I was presenting in school to my class and parents who came to see, I froze because I was scared and I was shy. I forgot what to do and tell and the teacher skipped me to give me time and I presented at the end.

I think I am an animal lover because well I love animals. They are kind, show unconditional love, they are awesome and always would make somebody's day. I would usually go on the weekend to this dog park and I would see many different breeds of dogs. They would always like to run around and play with other dogs and people who came. I loved seeing them and seeing them interact with other dogs. One time when I was at the park this dog chased me around multiple times because he thought I had treats. I did not. One of the dogs that I love is a dog named Grover. He is a mix of many different dog breeds. He is very playful, kind, and sweet.

I love animals because they act differently and I like how they act and how they think of things. For example if you put a rattlesnake or a lion in front of a mirror, they would think it is an enemy because they don't know it is an image of themselves. Also if you think of a cat vs a mouse, you realize that the cat would like to eat the mouse. This is because of their ancestors. They hunted for food. Usually when you think of a cat you think of a cute animal but you don't know what they could do to hurt you or other animals.
