

Qualities I'm Thankful For

By Andrew Jichetti

Thanksgiving is a time to be grateful for what we have. There are many things to be grateful for on Thanksgiving, such as family and friends. Every so often we take things for granted. Thanksgiving is a time to enjoy our family and never take anything or anyone for granted.

One quality that I am grateful for is being loyal because it builds a foundation of trust and a sense of security and unity within relationships. Sometimes, loyalty becomes a guiding light in difficult times. Loyalty often inspires others, which creates a bond that is deeper than friendship. Knowing my friends can count on me gives me a great feeling inside. Loyalty is the glue that holds friendships together and I'm grateful for having it in my life.

Another quality that I am grateful for is being kind is awesome because it makes everyone feel happy and included. When you're kind, you're like a superhero spreading positivity wherever you go. I'm thankful for being kind because it helps me make friends and creates a friendly vibe around me. Even small acts of kindness, like sharing notes or giving a compliment, can make a big difference. Plus, being kind feels good in my heart, like I'm doing something right. It's nice to know that a simple smile or a helping hand can brighten someone's day.

In conclusion, Thanksgiving is a time to be thankful for everything around us. It reminds us to appreciate the gifts of love and companionship. Thanksgiving is also a day that gives us countless reasons to be thankful.
