

Qualities I am Thankful For....

Qualities in a person can make or break a person or relationships with others. They can help to show how a person really is and to show their true selves. And being thankful for those qualities is even more important. During Thanksgiving, we show our gratitude and thankfulness in many different ways. One of the things that people often show gratitude for is good qualities in others or themselves. A good quality is something that describes a person and the way that they are in a positive way or form. This can also be in the form of actions like acting kind towards others. When trying to find your good qualities in yourself, it is good to ask others. This is because sometimes you don't recognize the good things about yourself. Even though we should be thankful for all qualities, we tend to favor some more than others. This is why I always like to think about the qualities that are less common in others or even just less appreciated by myself and by others.

One of the qualities that I am most thankful for is that I am very good at communicating. The reason why this is one of the qualities that I am most thankful for is because I often get asked by my family to help set up and send out invitations and tell others about an event. When doing this, I always make sure to ensure that everyone has the correct information and if there are any questions to answer them. This has been a quality that I had that I haven't realized until my family told me about it and now I am very thankful for it. Another quality about myself that I am thankful for is my creativity and problem solving skills. I think these two skills go hand in hand with each other. The reason for this is because in order to have problem solving skills you need to be creative. Likewise, in order to be creative you have to be able to solve problems through your creativity, like mistakes. I think I am creative and have good problem solving skills because I'm always making something from scratch or creating something for my mom like order forms and logos. During this, I use trial and error. This is when I do an initial trial of what I think I want it to look like, then I will ask my mom and fix the error that she saw. Some of the more common qualities that I have and am very thankful for are my kindness and generosity. When being kind, I tend to help others. Even when being kind, sometimes I don't even recognize it until someone compliments me to my parents. I think being kind is often a quality that many people have but don't always use. Many people have the ability to be kind, but don't ever use it. Or sometimes they will use it when they aren't around their friends. Being kind is something you do all the time. This includes when you are with friends, family and even by yourself. And if you only do it around family, then it isn't a true quality or trait of yours. I also think I am very generous. When I find myself being generous, I often see it around my friends and family, always giving to others and looking after them before I look for myself. I always ask if anyone needs help or if they want me to get them anything especially to my family during holidays or family events.

In conclusion, Thanksgiving is a time for thanks. It is now the season to show thanks and one way to do this is to look at the qualities for which you are thankful.