

Qualities I Am Thankful for...

When most people think of Thanksgiving they mainly think of the food and football, which is a part of the celebration, but is not the true meaning behind it. As Thanksgiving approaches, I think it is important to remember to give thanks for everything that I have such as my loving family, my house and my Catholic school. It is also important to be thankful for the qualities which mean any personal traits that make me myself.

One of the qualities that I personally think is very special to me is my honesty. I feel that being honest or telling the truth can help strengthen relationships with family and friends in a great way. I personally like when people are honest with me because it makes me feel trusted. Another quality that I have is my creativity. I think that being creative can make my mindset and personality a lot more interesting. Another quality that I have is my intelligence. I personally do well in school and am a smart person when it comes to academics and non-academic activities. Another quality is my curiosity, which also goes with intelligence. I think that being curious is an amazing thing. Wanting to learn something new is a great quality to have in life because it could lead you to a very successful career. Another quality that I am thankful for is my humor. My family and friends describe me as a very humorous person that makes people laugh. Being humorous could help strengthen friendships. The final quality that I am thankful for is that I am very understanding. I think it is very important to be understanding because many people go through different struggles and conflicts in life. Seeing both sides in an argument or story is so important to me because you never know what someone is going through, so it is important to understand and care for a person no matter who they are.

Overall I think that a person's qualities truly makes them who they are. I believe qualities are important to recognize in every person. Everyone has different qualities, some good and some not, but overall everyone has good qualities that make them themselves. It is important to see the good in everyone. So as Thanksgiving approaches, I will make sure to give thanks for everything that I have including my qualities and encourage other people to do the same. I hope to work on some of my qualities in the future to make me a better person.
