Qualities I Am thankful For...

Thanksgiving Day is about being thankful for all the things you have. A lot of people don't have what I have, which is why I am very thankful for the things I have. But I am also thankful for the qualities I have. I am Thankful for the gifts and things I know I'm capable of. I know what my strengths are, and I'm very thankful that I was given those strengths.

One Quality I have that I am thankful for is being capable of drawing. I have been drawing and studying art styles since I was in 4th Grade. I find calm and peace in creating new art pieces. My dream is to become a famous Animator. I want to start as an illustrator. Then, I would grow to make large art pieces. I want to show others a story through my drawing, even if it's only a small drawing. I want my work to show my unique personality. I study anatomy and proportions whenever I am drawing people. I have learned in order to make a drawing look realistic, you have to get the hang of drawing shapes. At first, it all looked complicated. But after looking over the steps at my own pace, I was able to draw unique shapes that I wasn't even able to do when I was younger. I have so many art books piled up on my desk. I love going over them, to remind me where I started and where I am now. I am so thankful for the feeling of motivation I have and that I found something I love to do.

In conclusion, I am very thankful for the qualities God gave me to continue drawing new designs in a sketchbook, such as perseverance, motivation, and a desire for learning. Having the ability to create new things on a small piece of paper is the most wonderful thing; I am Thankful for the ability to do so. I am very confident of making an art career in the future. I feel like I can become someone who inspires others to become an artist. I know that the journey will be rough, but as long as I keep trying, I feel like I am worthy of making a famous art piece.
