

Qualities I am Thankful For

It's good to have qualities that you can be thankful for. You use these qualities in everyday life when talking and interacting with people. You can also have bad qualities that will affect your everyday life. You could turn these bad qualities into good qualities that you could use in positive ways. Good qualities are good to have because they show you are a better person.

One quality I am thankful for is my honesty. Honesty is a good quality to have because if you are completely honest with people and tell them the whole truth they will be able to trust you. Trust is important to people because if someone trusts you that means that you can rely on them to have your back. Another quality I am thankful for is my compassion. Compassion is a good quality to have because it can make other people better about a situation or problem that is going on. Having compassion as a quality can make people like you better and compassion can also make you feel good about yourself. When you show compassion to someone you are putting aside anything that is happening with you or anything they did and you show compassion.

On Thanksgiving Day we celebrate our qualities and differences. We forgive people who are sorry for what they've done and they should forgive our own mistakes. We share a meal with our loved ones and celebrate.