THANKS

In this world there are many things that keep me from falling. There are people and things that I could always go like a super hero. What I am thankful for is my family, comics, and my ability to draw.

I'm thankful for my comics, because when ever I'm in a creative slump I read comics. When I read comics I absorb the creativity of the illustrations, to me each comic panel is a bottomless ocean of inspiration. The variety of art design is so interesting to me and makes me want to draw more.

I'm thankful for my drawing ability, because when I'm stressed and worn out I can just relax and draw and my stress would just die down like cooling lava. When I draw I can creatively express myself. Drawing is also something I do when bored. When I would be done reading a comic I can just draw everything I feel and use my imagination

I'm thankful for my family, because they are the dam that keeps my river of frustration from breaking out. My family is the one of the few people I can absolutely trust no matter what. I can always go to the people in my family when I'm down or stressed. They are that will always support. I will always love my family and they will always love me.
