One reason I'm thankful for love. Is because all over the country children have family members and parents that don't love them the way I know my parents love me. I know that I have a dog and a brother and a mom and dad that love me even if sometimes I tell my brother I hate him I don't mean it its just the thing to say in the moment. And even if I scream at my dog to shut up or yell at my parents to that they ruined my life it's just my emotions at the moment. I love them and I always will love them its just sometimes people fight but they get over it well at least my family does and I feel bad for how ever's families don't make up.
