

What I am thankful for...

by: Luke Macwan

What am I thankful for? Well, I am thankful that I have a chance to do good in life. By this I mean I'm happy I have a home, a family, and I live in America where dreams can come true.

I am thankful that I have a home. It gives me the opportunity to have my own room, a workspace. My desk is where I write, and I have enough space to store books and other items. If I didn't have such a nice house, I might not have these privileges. My home is where my things are.

I am also thankful for a caring family. They want me to make good decisions. If I had a family that didn't care about me, I could be making wrong choices. My family is where my heart is.

Finally, I am grateful to be in America. America gives me chances. A chance to go to school. A chance to study. A chance to prove to the world that I can do anything. I wouldn't have these chances if I wasn't in America. America is where my dreams are.

Clearly, to live in America is a privilege. So is my family and my home. Thanksgiving is a chance to be thankful for all that we have. Be grateful and happy Thanksgiving!
