

The most interesting character in "Saint Lucy's" is Mirabela because she doesn't act normal. She acts like a wolf and doesn't change like all of the other characters, who end up changing into human kids and start acting more like human kids. But Mirabela stays like a wolf and still acts like a wolf. She also treats everyone with friendliness, unlike most of the others, who start acting meaner and meaner to each other. Plus, they continue to compare themselves to others and make others feel bad, but Mirabela doesn't do any of that to anyone. She tries to help her sisters, but they just push her away. That's why I think Mirabela is an interesting character.
